

Are you investing in the health benefits that really matter to your employees?

A recent study reveals a shift in employer/employee perceptions over which health benefits represent the most value to employees.

Healthy, but more importantly, happy :)

Employer vs. Employee perceptions for health concerns:

Employer vs. Employee perceptions for mental health concerns:

Sharing is caring

Proportion of employees who would split the cost with their employer to access these benefits:

MONEY DOESN'T DOES MATTER

A study found that

55%

of employees are concerned with job security and having insufficient money to retire comfortably.

For more information on our recent study visit the MetLife stand to speak to one of our team members or download the full report at metlife.com.au/efts.

2016 MetLife Employee Benefits Trends Study Australia.